Government Civil Hospital, EMIL WIEWELS, a native of Trier and late with Messrs. Carlowitz &

Hongkone, December 5th, 1899. An amusing article on the proposed introduction of the gold standard in Siam appears in the London and China Express at Colombo. The direct steamers are the of the 3rd November. The article commences by saying that "silver having shown "a tendency to remain fairly steady in the " neighbourhood of 271d, an ounce, its en-"emies are, naturally, preparing a fresh question as one of sentiment rather than as one of business, and he treats it on that ground. The introduction of sentiment into business naturally leads to confusion not wanting in the article under notice, Who are the enemies of silver to whom rewe should not expect to find them in Siam, a country whose present standard is silver and which could consequently have no interest in depreciating that metal. Siam's can be no mistake as to her motive. If she makes the suggested change from silver to gold it will be solely on the ground of selfinterest, and not out of any enmity to silver. This absurd suggestion of a sentimental hostility to silver runs all through the article and discounts such arguments as are advanced.

brought forward that silver has proved itself a far more stable standard of value, in relation to commodities, than gold, If that be so, how is it that all silver salaries paid to Europeans in the Far East have had to be adjusted in relation to gold, either by a definite increase in silver or by granting exchange compensation? If the writer of the London and China Epress | popularise the Island Continent as a holiday article were working on a salary paid in silver we feel well assured that he would decline in the value of that metal were not taken into account. Next we come to the elatement that, notwithstanding the fall in silver, the trade of countries possessing the It is about to close an exceptionally presperous for an adjournment to get more evidence. silver standard grew and prospered, while in gold countries prices were falling, trade and commerce languished, and gloom and depresssion prevailed. That may be considered rather a nicely turned sontence, but unfortunately it is entirely contrary to the facts of the case. Compare the present state the former, who was playing an exceeding good game added a third with a very fine shot during of trade and commorce in Great Britain; with what it was twenty-five years ago; then an equal number of representative silver countries, and say whether the comparison results more favourably for silver or for gold. Next we have the statement that silver "remains the currency of "India, although the mints have been closed, "against it, and an imaginary gold standard "set up by giving certain silver discs which "are worth, intrinsically, about 10id., an "imaginary gold value of 1s. 4d. The difference between a tenpenny and a one-and-fourpenny rupes appears rather considerable, and the argument that the difference really means nothing at all is too absurd to call for serious reply.

What has chiefly excited the choler of our contemporary is our statement that the proposed change in Siam, if effected, will "hasten the inevitable change in China" as well. No doubt the introduction of the gold standard into China is an operation that will demand much serious consideration, and as to the ways and means and the time for effecting the change there is room for almost endless discussion, but no one, we think, can entertain any doubt that the thigh. change will come sometime. China cannot always remain in her present unprogressive state, and when she once fairly enters upon a career of progress the reform of her currency will be one of the questions that will 30.00 command the attention of her statesmen. Speaking not with reference to China in particular, but the world at large, it will be readily admitted that a universal monetary standard is a commercial desideratum, and to that goal modern financial policy is tending. Special interests may suffer by the change, the world at large will gain. For our own part, we long entertained the belief Sample bottles and smaller quanti- that bimetallism would triumph in the ties will be supplied at proportionate long run, but bimetallism being now a lost cause, and the choice being confined to gold and silver, the preponderance of advantage lies with gold. (Puiene Judge).

Mr. Grist (Messrs. Wilkinson and Grist) appeared for plaintiff and Mr. Brutton (Messrs. sey and Brutton) for defendant. Mr. Grist said his Lordship would remember that this case came on on Thursday last and was adjourned at the request of his friend to enable him to get behind, if he could, the document which he admitted was signed by defendant. That was the present state of the case.

His Lordship-Yes, I think that was so. Mr. Brutton said his Lordship would recollect that on Thursday his friend stated that this paper writing was an account stated, and that therefore he (Mr. Brutton) was not entitled to call any evidence or cross-examine the witness on the facts which led up to the signing of that paper writing. He submitted in the first instance that this paper writing was not an account stated at all. His Lordship-I do not think it is, if you.

APPOINTMENT.

The N. C. Daily News Native correspondent telegraphs from Poking under date of 24th Two consors conjointly memorialised the Empress Dowager yesterday to the effect that the success Kang Yi had met in raising funds light-draught vessels a speciality. Contractors for the exchaquer although good would have for the supply and erecting of any type of for the exchequer although good would have been far better had be been one in whom the machinery. New work and repairs supervised. mercantile classes and traders believed, hence it followed that Kuanglung and Kuangsi had only been partly exploited for the good of the State. This argument struck the Empress Dowager as a very cogont one and she consulted with the Grand Council as to the man who possessed most fully the confidence of the mercantile classes, among the high Ministers of the Court. The reply was unanimously in favour of Li Hung-chang will the result that H. E. was this morning appointed " High Commissioner on Commercial Affairs, with instructions to visit the various treaty ports and investigate the conditions therein." This appointment has been made not exactly in favour of the commercial and trading classes, but really for the purpose of persuading these people to contribute more generously to the needs of the Empress Downger's armies. LAND "BOOM" AT NEWCHWANG The Newchwang correspondent of the N.
